Ain't That Just the Way ("He Thinks He's the Alpha and I'm the Omega") This is just one of the many things Donavan Morain said that made me wish I had known him earlier in life. I caught up with him and asked him what was wrong that night. He told me his 11-year-old sister, Etika, was very ill at the time of the surgery and while the rest of the family worried themselves sick, he was just trying to get himself ready to help his sister. Before the surgery she was unconscious and she didn't come around until about 3 years later. He shared a memory of her first and only birthday after he was able to make her medically stable. She didn't start school until her 4th birthday. The joy of her first day of school was cut short because a friend said, "Donovan, she can't go in that school because she's the black sheep of the family." Donovan thought it was just a joke but as he looked at his sister he realized it wasn't. When she got home he said that you can't stand it, it hurts to hear, but the truth hits you like a hammer. She cried and told him she wasn't going back. He understands because he feels the same. She is the black sheep of the family. If you know her you know that is true. Let me tell you one more thing that Donavan also said that that night made me wish I had known him earlier in life. He is married now and that woman is a different person. She is absolutely beautiful. She married a man who loves her and she loves him. The difference is that she is kind, gentle, considerate, warm, trusting and also forgiving of his less than perfect past. Read how he explained the difference here and here. That is just one example of the power of perspective. I wish I had known him earlier in life. What would my perspective be now if I had? What would my conclusion about the world be? Yes, he is a bird. A free bird. A free bird who has paid his
